

Al-Hussein Bin Talal University

Faculty of Law

Course Description

3 credit hours	Entrance to Law Science	1408101
-----------------------	--------------------------------	----------------

-		Prerequisite
---	--	---------------------

This course examines the formation and definition of the law, its objectives and functions, its importance to society, the distinction between it and other norms of social science, the statement of the law's sections, branches and sources of law (such as legislation, custom, rules of Islamic jurisprudence, principles of Islamic sharia and jurisprudence), the application and interpretation of the law, and its repeal; It also addresses the right, in terms of definition, types and division of rights, persons, scope, sources, use and evidence of the right, and how to protect it.

3 credit hours	Civil Law - Sources of Commitment	1408102
-----------------------	--	----------------

1408101		Prerequisite
----------------	--	---------------------

This course deals with the study of the general theory of the sources and division of the commitment and the definition of the origin and sources of the obligation, where it deals with the voluntary sources of contract and individual will, and the involuntary sources: injurious act, beneficial act, and law.

3 credit hours	Civil Code - Obligation Provisions	1408200
-----------------------	---	----------------

1408102		Prerequisite
----------------	--	---------------------

This course deals with the examination of the effects of the obligation and its optional and compulsory implementation; in addition to addressing the descriptions of the obligation, the transfer of the obligation to assign religion, the assignment of the right and the termination of the obligation.

3 credit hours	Civil Code - so-called contracts	1408300
-----------------------	---	----------------

1408200		Prerequisite
----------------	--	---------------------

This course deals with so-called contracts in the Civil Code, by defining it, identifying its legal characteristics, its pillars, effects, detailed study for sale and rent contracts and other types of sales provided for by law, and the lease contract in terms of its definition, elements, provisions, effects and termination, and then addresses the applications of the Owners and Tenants Act.

3 credit hours	Labor and Social Security Law	1408201
-----------------------	--------------------------------------	----------------

1408102		Prerequisite
----------------	--	---------------------

This course deals with the explanation of the provisions of the Labor Code and the Social Security Act. In section I, the examination of the Labor Code in terms of its sources, the contract of individual employment, established by its parties, of the rights and obligations of the worker and the employer of occupational injury, occupational illnesses, termination of the contract, the contract of collective action, its provisions, and all related matters. Section II examines the Social Security Act and examines it in terms of indicating the public assets of social security systems, determining the scope of the Act's application, and examining the social insurance covered by it.

3 credit hours	Principles of commercial law	1408110
-----------------------	-------------------------------------	----------------

1408101		Prerequisite
----------------	--	---------------------

This course addresses the emergence and evolution of commercial law and the distinction between business and civil work in terms of distinctions between them and the criteria for differentiation between each other's acts. And the study of land-based businesses by virtue of their subjectivity and subsidiary business, maritime business, the merchant's requirements and duties to register in the commercial registry, Keeping business books, taking a business address and refraining from unlawful competition commercial contracts, commercial mortgage, commission, brokerage and contract of carriage.

3 credit hours	Special subjects in the Civil Code	1408306
1408300		Prerequisite

This course deals with selected subjects of civil law, such as some recent contracts of interest like agreement contract, proxy contract, certain subjects relating to civil liability, liability, contract, and special subjects relating thereto.

3 credit hours	Legal terms in English	1408202
1408101		Prerequisite

This course deals with certain Arabic legal terms and the corresponding English language that are of interest to the student and that increase his knowledge of English in his field of specialization, and the use of language in the fields of legal work.

3 credit hours	insurance contracts	1408304
1408300		Prerequisite

This course deals with the definition of insurance contracts in terms of their concept and significance, the parties to the insurance contract, its confirmation and the obligations of its parties, the risks covered by this contract, as well as the types of insurance, the special laws governing the insurance contract and the effects on each party's rights and obligations, and modern ways to address the problems arising therefrom and legal solutions thereto.

3 credit hours	Commercial Law - Companies and Bankruptcies	1408215
1408110		Prerequisite

This course deals with the formation of companies, the concept and types of company, the distinction between commercial companies and civil companies, the provisions and legal pillars relating to their formation and the provisions on the liquidation and expiry of companies in general Company of Solidarity, Simple Recommendation Company, Scissors Company and Liability Company Limited Equity Recommendation Company, Private Shareholding Company, Public Shareholding Company, and legal provisions relating to each of these companies in addition to foreign companies, holding companies, exempt companies, and addressing the subject of commercial bankruptcy, bankruptcy-protective correction and related legal provisions.

3 credit hours	Commercial Law - Commercial Papers	1408211
1408110		Prerequisite

This course deals with the legal provisions of all commercial papers regulated by the Trade Law (withdrawal bond, order bond, cheque) in terms of their functions and the legal provisions of each paper. It also deals with the most important banking transactions such as deposit, current account, financial credit, documentary credit and letter of guarantee.

3 credit hours	e-commerce law	1408311
1408110		Prerequisite

This course deals with the study of the legal provisions governing electronic commerce at the domestic and international levels, the Jordanian Electronic Transactions Act and the UNESTRAL Model Law in particular. The textbook's vocabulary includes the definition and indication of the relevance of electronic commerce, the legal problems arising therefrom and the proposed solutions thereto, such as those relating to electronic contracting, electronic signature, consumer protection in electronic commerce, means of fulfilment in electronic commerce, applicable law in electronic commerce and means of resolving disputes arising therefrom.

3 credit hours	commercial arbitration	1408314
	1408215	Prerequisite

This course deals with the study of arbitration as a common means and alternative resolution of disputes arising in both domestic and international relations, including the study of the concept, types and legal nature of arbitration, the provisions of the agreement on arbitration, the formation of the arbitral tribunal and arbitration proceedings, the effects of the judgements of the arbitrators and its judgement and the control of the State's judgement.

3 credit hours	Civil Code - Original Rights and Dependency	1408301
	1408200	Prerequisite

This course examines the nature of original rights in, such as property rights in general, the reasons for the owning of property, abstract rights and their applications such as the rights of passage, drinking, sewage, road and common wall, the right of easement, the right of utilization, the right of sovereignty, the right of cessation and the rights deriving from suspended property, as well as the nature of the subordinate rights of an insurance mortgage (official), possessory mortgage, concession rights and related legal transactions.

3 credit hours	private international law	1408401
	1408302	Prerequisite

This course addresses the nature of private international law is and identifies its general theoretical sources of conflict of laws, and the application of conflict solutions in cases of contractual obligations (International) tort liability and personal status laws. Then, conflict of jurisdiction and determination of the competent judiciary in the adjudication of disputes involving a foreign element with reference to arbitrators and its method; The implementation of foreign provisions, which deal with the general theory of nationality in terms definition, the reasons for acquiring indigenous nationality and emergency nationality in accordance with the Jordanian Nationality Act, In addition, showing how to resolve the conflict of legislative and judicial jurisdiction, how to enforce foreign judgements, and how to acquire and lose Jordanian nationality.

3 credit hours	intellectual property rights	1408310
	1408110	Prerequisite

This course deals with the study of legal provisions of intellectual rights in the Jordanian and international legal system and the application of these rulings before Jordanian courts and other relevant bodies. It also deals with literary rights, which include authors' rights and their neighboring rights, and industrial rights, which include patents, drawings, and industrial models, trade rights, the most prominent of which are trademarks, trade names, trade addresses and all legal provisions relating to those rights.

3 credit hours	Code of Civil Procedure	1408302
	1408200	Prerequisite

This course deals with the examination of the rules of due process before the civil courts from the time of the proceedings in the Registry, the procedure of notification, the procedure of trial until the judgement, the methods of appeal against judgements, appeal, discrimination, retrial, and objection of others. The types of courts and the competencies of each type. The course aims to familiarize students with how legal work and litigation procedures are conducted, both in theory and in practice, in civil proceedings before the various levels of the courts, as well as the examination of the judiciary, the appointment of judges and their invalidity and refolement.

3 credit hours	Research Approach and Legal Writing Curricula	1408402
90 credits		Prerequisite

This article examines the concept of legal research and the principles underlying its curricula, types, steps, methods of data collection and analysis, how to deal with sources of legal information derived from legislation, jurisprudence, as well as providing students with legal research tools and means from the identification of the problem to the writing and drafting of legal research.

3 credit hours	Judicial Applications	1408400
1408302		Prerequisite

This course deals with the definition of the applicable aspect of the law before the courts of rights, penal and administrative courts by selecting certain cases that enable students to see how the proceedings are brought and conducted, court procedures and sentencing at various levels of the courts, as well as all types of judicial decisions, whether administrative or criminal.

3 credit hours	Evidence and Implementation Law	1408303
1408302		Prerequisite

This course deals with the law of evidence, in terms of examining evidence of right whether it can be done by writing, testimony, evidence, acknowledgement, oath, inspection or experience in accordance with the Civil Code and the law of evidence in accordance with the latest amendments. It also deals with the explanation of enforcement law in terms of the search of the enforcement service and the statement of the authority that carries out the execution service and its competence and methods of compulsory enforcement in terms of the parties and conditions of enforcement. It is then exposed to funds that cannot be executed as general rules in the seizure of funds and its effects.

3 credit hours	The law in our lives	1408100
-		Prerequisite

This course deals with the dissemination of legal awareness in the student and familiarizing him with his rights and duties and the role of the law in the achievement of justice and the development of society. Therefore, students must be aware of the legal rule and its characteristics as well as the concept of the law and its moral and religious norms. It also addresses the student's familiarity with the branches of public and private law and the study of the sources of law, how legislation and the constitutional stages of enactment must be developed and gives the student an idea of the most important legislation that directly affects citizens.

3 credit hours	Business Legislation for Students of the School of Business Administration and Economics	1408213
-		Prerequisite
This course deals with the study of what business is and the distinction between civil work and types of business, the study of the concept of the trader, the conditions for the acquisition of the merchant's and trader's status, the commercial registry and business books of its kinds, its relevance, the legal provisions relating thereto and unlawful competition, the study of the concept of the company and its legal provisions, the concept of bankruptcy, commercial banking papers and bank transactions such as current account, bank deposits and letters of security.
3 credit hours	Maritime and Air Law	1408212
1408110		Prerequisite
This course deals with the study and seizure of the ship's legal regime and its nature, nationality, registration, ownership, restitution, and restitution of rights in kind, thereby dealing with persons of maritime navigation, indicating who is the owner, equipment, and master of the ship, as well as with contracts governing maritime activity, such as maritime labor, maritime sales contracts, and shipping contracts and types. (e.g., sword contract, fob contract), insurance contract, contracts for rescue of ships, maritime liability in terms of: Collision, rescue, maritime insurance, identification of types of marine sales, and statement of the ship's legal regime.
3 credit hours	Alternative dispute resolution solutions	1408305
1408302		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition of alternative means of dispute settlement, such as concepts, characteristics, and types (judicial, special, Convention) and conditions, the distinction between it and similar means, as well as arbitration, its concepts, characteristics, conditions, similarities, and differences with similar means. In addition, the study of the subject matter of negotiation, its concepts, features, and conditions, as well as concepts, characteristics, and types of reconciliation.
3 credit hours	commercial contracts	1408312
1408110		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition, relevance, types and legal regulation of commercial contracts, the study of the theoretical and practical basis for the formulation of commercial contracts in form and subject matter, and the study of special types of national and international commercial contracts used in commercial legal relations.
3 credit hours	international trade law	1408313
1408211		Prerequisite
This course addresses international trade law in terms of its origin, characteristics, sources and customs and then the transition to the efforts of the United Nations and the World Trade Organization (WTO) To regulate and unify the rules of international trade law by the committees formed for this purpose, first and foremost by my Committee (UNSTRAL UNCTAD) as well as the General Principles of International Trade Contracts, how they are formulated and negotiated, study some of these contracts, such as the International Transport Contract, International Maritime Sales Contract and Documentary Credits Contract, as well as study of some of the new contracts with economic aspects, such as information contracts and technology transfer, and then a brief study of international commercial arbitration and its provisions. (1980) the GATT Convention and study selected topics from international trade such as foreign investment, capital transfer, international companies, export and import of goods, customs restrictions, and foreign concessions.

3 credit hours	Political Systems and Constitutional Law (1)	1408140
-		Prerequisite
This course examines the form of the State, its system of governance, its powers, and the types of Governments, as well as the types of political systems and means of attribution of power, monarchy, analysis of universally recognized political systems, presidential system, parliament, and the Assembly's Government. It also includes the identification of constitutional law by analysing the concept of the Constitution, its methods of origin and types, how it is amended, ways of ending the Constitution and censoring the constitutionality of laws.
3 credit hours	Political Systems and Constitutional Law (2)	1408240
1408140		Prerequisite
This course deals with the legal and constitutional development of the eastern Jordan region by identifying the legal status of this area prior to the establishment of the Principality in 1921. It also deals with the definition of the Basic Law of the eastern Jordan Principality in 1928. It then examines the Constitution of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan of 1946. The study focuses on the Kingdom's Constitution of 1952 and indicates how it originated and how it was modified. Fundamental to this Constitution by defining the system of government, rights, and freedoms and the three authorities whose functions are in accordance with the Constitution. Ultimately, addressing amendments to the Constitution to date.
3 credit hours	Administrative Law (1)	1408120
1408101		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition, origin, sources, characteristics, and scope of application of administrative law. It deals with administrative management in its central and decentralized forms and examines the public office in all its aspects and thus with public funds and related matters.
3 credit hours	public international law	1408150
1408101		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition of public international law, its nature, the statement of its branches and historical development, its compulsory basis, its relationship with domestic law and its sources, persons of international law, the study of a State as the principal person of international law, the definition and elements of a State, the emergence and recognition of States and the forms of recognition, and the withdrawal of recognition of a State, and thus the study of international treaties in terms, types, conditions of conclusion, enforcement and application. The course also deals with inheritance between States and peaceful methods of settlement of international disputes and the International Criminal Court in terms of its composition, competence and working mechanism.
3 credit hours	Penal Code/General Section	1408130
1408101		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition of the Penal Code, its sources, types, sections, theory of crime, punishment, and elements of crime: the legal element, exposure to the principle of the legality of crimes and penalties and its impediments to its realization, namely, the grounds for justification, the material element (criminal conduct, criminal consequence, causation between conduct and result) and the theory of attempted crime. Hence the moral element of the crime and the exposure to intentional and unintended crimes.

The course also addresses the theory of punishment in terms of its definition and characteristics, the types of penalties, the imposition of punishment, the reasons for aggravation and mitigation, the reasons for the expiry of the sentence, and (precautionary measures. criminal contribution; original, moral, and dependent).

3 credit hours	constitutional jurisdiction	1408340
1408240		Prerequisite

This course deals with giving students an idea of the concept of the judiciary and its role in oversight in different States and systems. The Constitution further defines the Constitutional Court Act of 2012 as a new approach and addresses its composition and competence, those who have the right to direct and indirect appeal, its procedures and those who have the right to request interpretation of the Constitution's provisions. The convening of the Constitutional Court, its organizational and administrative structure and all matters dealt with in the Constitutional Court Act.

3 credit hours	Criminology and Punishment	1408232
1408230		Prerequisite

This course deals with the topics of criminality and the science of punishment, in terms of the definition of criminology, its history, its origins and its relationship to the Penal Code. Individual and social factors of criminal behaviour, various theories developed on the subject, The course also addresses the knowledge and definition of punishment and the evolution of the idea of punishment depending on the evolution of societies. and exposure to the most important penal schools, penal institutions and their types, and precautionary measures, indicating the best treatment of offenders for, rehabilitation such as police release, suspension of execution and subsequent care for those released.

3 credit hours	Administrative Law (2)	1408220
1408120		Prerequisite

This course deals with a detailed study of administrative activity in terms of administrative control, public utilities, administrative decisions, administrative contracts, and the role of the administrative authority in the application of laws and regulations.

3 credit hours	E-governance legislation	1408320
1408220		Prerequisite

This course deals with the definition of the concept of e-governance and e-government and the statement of its applications in Jordan, France, and some other countries. It also describes the importance of e-governance, its implications, its applicability, its factors of success and the negatives of the introduction of e-governance system. Also describe the objectives and determinants of e-administration and study the protection of information for e-management system by identifying the security of databases, operating systems, information privacy and the types and characteristics of viruses and ways to combat and avoid them.

3 credit hours	local administration law	1408321
1408220		Prerequisite

This course addresses the study of the general principles of local governance in terms of their definition, origin, relevance, pillars and components and special applications in some contemporary States in the light of their legislation. In addition, it tackles Jordan's local administration deals with the status, development, and levels of development, how each level of activity is formed and how it operates in the light of existing legislation, in particular the Municipalities Act, the City and Village Administration Act and other relevant laws and regulations.

3 credit hours	international and regional organizations	1408350
1408150		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition of international organization and its importance in solving problems relating to international peace and well-being at the international or global level such as the United Nations as a global international organization or at the regional level such as the Arab League and the European Union as regional organizations and with the definition of each organization, nature, structure, and functions and how to exercise functions or activities.
3 credit hours	information technology crimes	1408330
1408231		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition of crimes committed using modern technology devices and machinery such as computer, information systems, communication networks, the Internet and software, as well as the description of the characteristics of information technology crimes, characteristics of the information offender and the international efforts to counter such crimes as they may be transnational crimes, the means of achieving information security, the internal legislative response to such crimes and the procedural aspects of information technology crimes.
3 credit hours	Penal Code/Offences against Persons	1408230
1408130		Prerequisite
This course deals with a detailed study of offences against persons that affect their life, health, dignity, reputation, and honour, such as intentional and unintentional homicide, beatings resulting in death, permanent impairment, and crimes of intentional and unintentional abuse. Freedoms, such as deprivation of liberty, unlawful arrest, threats, infringement of homes, as well as crimes against honour and consideration such as indecency, slander, and contempt. According to Jordanian penal legislation and other legislation reinforced by the jurisprudence and the position of the Jordanian and foreign judiciary thereon.
3 credit hours	Penal Code/Offences against Funds	1408231
1408230		Prerequisite
This course deals with the study of offences against property, the definition and scope of such offences and the similarities and differences between offences affecting money. It addresses the offence of theft in terms of concept, elements and images which may be ordinary, objective, aggravating and mitigating circumstances, as well as the offence of fraud and the giving of a cheque without credit. (The definition of the cheque and its compulsory statements and the elements of the crime of the cheque), the offence of mistrust and embezzlement and their elements, the distinction between them and the offences attached thereto, and the statement of the comprehensive provisions for offences against funds in accordance with Jordanian penal legislation that are reinforced by Jordanian and foreign jurisprudence.
3 credit hours	Public finances and tax legislation	1408121
1408101		Prerequisite
This course deals with the study of the general grounds and rules governing the State's finances as well as the science of finance, the theory of taxation, its development and its financial and social objectives, focusing on the analysis of Jordan's most important financial legislation, the financial provisions contained in the Constitution, the General Budgetary Code and the Income Tax Code as a model example of Jordan's taxation and indicating the role of direct and indirect taxation in balancing financial abundance and social justice.
3 credit hours	administrative judiciary	1408420
1408220		Prerequisite

This course examines the formation and evolution of the administrative judiciary in comparative legislation and regulations. It also identifies the administrative judicial courts, their competences and litigation procedures before them, cases raised before this court, such as annulment and compensation, as well as the subject of judicial oversight and its scope over the work of the public administration and its respect for the principle of legality.

3 credit hours	Special penal legislation	1408337
1408231		Prerequisite

This course deals with providing students with legal information about the penal legislation contained in the special laws and not covered by the penal law and highlighting the importance of such legislation as a practical survivor and the tendency of penal legislation to criminalize within the framework of special penal legislation, It also clarifies the dissemination of the Economic Crimes Act, the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, the Arms and Ammunition Act, the Juvenile Act, the Money wash and Human Trafficking Prevention Act.

3 credit hours	environmental law	1408351
1408150		Prerequisite

This course deals with the definition of the environment and its main problems, the formation and development of environmental law and its sources and the identification of the most prominent principles on which it is based. It also addresses national environmental protection rules in accordance with the institutional and legal framework environmental protection efforts and the role of the judiciary in applying and enforcing environmental legislation, both civil and criminal and review of environmental offences and offences and the legal regime relating to civil liability for environmental damage.

3 credit hours	public rights and freedoms	1408241
1408240		Prerequisite

This course deals with the identification of public rights and freedoms, the rights and freedoms of ancient times, Arabs and Muslims, the rights and freedoms of Western States and the stages of their report; The natural rights phase and the development of the status of the State, and rights and freedoms, their multiple manifestations and guarantees in Jordanian law, as well as international efforts to establish the rights and freedoms of individuals and to analyse the most important international instruments and treaties relating to those rights and freedoms.

3 credit hours	Military Penal Code	1408336
1408231		Prerequisite

This course addresses the concept and distinction between military crime and ordinary crime and the elements and scope of military crime and indicates the most important military offences of desertion and absenteeism, infringement of military orders and instructions, the crimes of disobedience and insurgency, the crime of use of severity, violence, disorderly military discipline, offences relating to recruitment transactions, complicity in the performance of functional duties, crimes of justice, theft, embezzlement and misappropriation of funds, the offences of self-harm, impersonation, decorations, destruction, enemy-related offences and related offences in the Jordanian Military Penal Code.

3 credit hours	Crimes against State security	1408334
1408231		Prerequisite
This course examines the historical development of State security offences, the study of offences against the external security of the State (criminal offences, crimes against international law such as espionage, broadcasting of State secrets and documents, crimes of contact with the enemy, crimes that undermine the prestige of the State and infringe upon religious feeling. It also deals with offences against the internal security of the State, such as offences against the Constitution, rape of power, terrorism, infringement of national unity and the financial status of the State, as well as economic offences in terms of sentencing as crimes that undermine the status and prestige of the State, weaken the feeling of the people, and weaken the nation's psyche.
3 credit hours	Origins of Criminal Procedures	1408331
1408231		Prerequisite
This course deals with the examination of cases arising from the crime, the general theory of the organization of the criminal justice system, the Public Prosecutor's Office and the preliminary investigation, the composition of the judiciary and its powers of criminal evidence, the procedural stages followed from the crime to the execution of the sentence, and the methods of challenging criminal sentences. including training in courts and lawyers.
3 credit hours	Forensic Medicine and Forensic evidence	1408332
1408230		Prerequisite
This course defines how forensic doctors, general doctors and medical laboratories can be used in a way that serves the course of investigation, trials, understanding the content of medical reports, the ability to discuss them, detect judicial deaths, autopsies, wounds, drowning, asphyxiation, and other incidents on scientific grounds to serve justice.
3 credit hours	Islamic Criminal Legislation	1408335
1408231		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition of criminal legislation, with the comparison between criminal legislation in Islam and the Jordanian Penal Code, the statement of the provisions of murder, apostasy, civil war, aggrieve and the opinions of jurists and the comparison of those crimes in the Penal Code, the establishment of the act of murder and the theory of causation in Islamic criminal legislation, the satisfaction of the victim with murder and wrongdoing in Islamic. (Frontiers, qisas, condolences) and subsidiary penalties in Islamic legislation (diyah, atonement, fasting, denial of inheritance) Crimes against oneself without murder, adultery, testimony provisions and how and how much the sentence is carried out.
3 credit hours	international humanitarian law	1408251
1408150		Prerequisite
This course deals with the definition and legal nature of international humanitarian law and its basic principles, its relationship with international human rights law, and includes an examination of the legal scope of international humanitarian law and international and non-international conflicts, the personal scope of the law and the focus on victims of armed conflicts (wounded, prisoners, sick and missing persons), protection of the civilian population, means of application of international humanitarian law, liability for breach of this law and jurisdiction over crimes that occur contrary to international humanitarian law.
11		